1924 in Music

Per Lifehacker's article on 1924 copyrights:
https://lifehacker.com/these-1924-copyrighted-works-enter-the-public-domain-in-1839612665
"For the second year in a row, January 1 brings thousands of classic copyrighted works into the public domain. Under U.S. law, works published any time in 1924 will enter the public domain on January 1, 2020. This includes books, films, artworks, sheet music, and other concrete creative works —but unfortunately not audio recordings...any audio recordings from this year don't lose copyright until 2025"!

So, do not download the following recordings to your devices until that time, else the ghost of Sonny Bono will wake you every morning with I Got You Babe, sans Cher!

Best of the past decade, 2010-2019

The following lists are arbitrary, just A/V media that held my attention in the 'teens. Since I gave up on television July 2018, I can't vouchsafe for a couple of movies; as to the tube, these were the ones I liked up to '18, so I won't even comment on a bunch of programs (outside of PBS, who still provide free views of fun stuff like The Durrells in Corfu and Masterpiece Mystery in a reasonable window) I'll probably never see. As I mostly listen to jazz radio, the only place I hear current pop is on CBC's Q, hence the presence of Ms. King and Mr. Horan. My fav song of the era is probably Born This Way, by Gaga.*

Rest in peace, my queen, Jerry Herman. Other cultural touchstones lost in 2019: Carol Channing, Doris Day, Jessye Norman, Carroll Spinney, Toni Morrison, Diahann Carroll, Michael J. Pollard, Anna Karina, Robert Forster, Robert Evans, Peter Fonda, Peter Mayhew, Dr. John, Neil Innes, Michel Legrande, Andre Previn, Grumpy Cat, Sue Lyon, John Singleton, Danny Aiello, and the guy who did all those cool 4AD album covers.
